DID YOU KNOW.....

♦ Until the railroad was constructed in 1868, it took a slow and lengthy seven hours to get from Glen Cove to Manhattan by horse and buggy.

♦ There used to be two large lakes in the village: one where the firehouse is, the other behind the stores on Glen Street. They were called Upper and Lower Lakes.

♦ LaMarcus Thompson, a Glen Cove resident, was an inventor who worked on developing roller coasters, otherwise known as gravity rides. Before that, he had focused his attentions on producing seamless hosiery.

♦ Captain Kidd’s treasure was reputedly buried and dug up in what is now Garvies Point.

♦ The first school was located where Staples parking lot is today. The next school was across the street on the corner of Highland Road and School Street.

♦ Landing Road once went all the way to the water and was called Main Street. It ended at the ferry dock where the steamboats landed.

♦ The famous 19th century artist, John LaFarge, had his first studio at the end of McLoughlin Street. The self-portrait he painted of himself in the woods there is in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

♦ In 1916 The Glen Cove Echo published a segment dedicated to the controversial issue of women's suffrage. Charlotte Nelson Way authored a pro-suffrage explanation that she had met some California women voters and found that "to the outward appearance they were normal. They look like us in Glen Cove, they have homes and children as we do — and they vote!"

♦ Henry Clay Folger, President of Standard Oil, and his wife Emily, who resided in Glen Cove, amassed the world's most comprehensive collection - over 92,000 books and materials related to William Shakespeare. The Folger's collection became The Folger Shakespeare Library, located in Washington, DC.

♦ In 1925, the midst of the prohibition era, two trucks filled with 308 cases of whiskey left Glen Cove and were headed for Manhattan. After a chase and a shoot-out with federal agents, four men including the two whiskey owners from Glen Cove were apprehended.

♦ Henry's Confectionary, which still exists today, was established in 1929 on Glen Street and was one of few buildings that remained in place throughout massive urban renewal and economic ups and downs.

♦ Actress Audrey Hepburn came to the Glen Cove train station as the star in the 1954 film Sabrina. She played the part of a chauffeur's capricious daughter looking for love.

♦ In 1967 the City of Glen Cove proposed having an official flower. Violets won the honor, although one fellow proposed that dandelions had more merit, albeit some find them "irritating."

♦ Pearsall Avenue was once called “Rattlesnake Hollow.”

♦ The Dosoris area, including Morgan’s Island, was not part of the Musketa Cove purchase.

♦ During the Civil War, the intersection of Cottage Row and the present School Street was named “Union Square.”

♦ The clay beds at Garvies Point were the result of a glacial deposit along the north shore of Long Island.
