FROM THE ROBERT R. COLES LONG ISLAND HISTORY ROOM

Matinecock Friends Meeting House by Dave Nieri

An historical marker on Duck Pond Road near the driveway leading to the Matinecock Meeting House commemorates the oldest organized Friends Meeting in the United States. The Society of Friends, better known as Quakers, has its origins in England in the 1640s, and this often persecuted Christian sect has a long history on Long Island. There is speculation that Richard Smith, the founder of Smithtown, may have been the first Quaker to arrive on Long Island, having landed at Southampton in 1643. What is documented is that a number of Quaker missionaries arrived in New Amsterdam in 1657 on the vessel Woodhouse— 24 years before William Penn established his colony of Pennsylvania, which became a haven for Quakers. The Dutch administration of New Amsterdam (Manhattan and Brooklyn) and the western part of Long Island did not look favorably on the Quakers. Several of the missionaries headed eastward on the Island, where the Society of Friends seemed to fare better in the more tolerant English settlements from Hempstead to the Hamptons.

Many Quakers settled in Oyster Bay, notably Captain John Underhill, who converted to Quakerism at the request of his wife, and the Townsend brothers, John and Henry. It was Captain Underhill who purchased the land to the west of Oyster Bay that is today Locust Valley. Musketa Cove's founders also came from Oyster Bay, and although it doesn't appear that the five proprietors themselves were Quakers, some of their family members were. Prominent local families who were members of the Society of Friends include names such as Cocks, Titus, Willis, Hicks, Valentine, Underhill, and Willets.

There were many Quaker farms and families living in the area that today includes the villages of Lattingtown, Locust Valley, Matinecock, and Mill Neck. Their meetings, initially held in homes in 1671, make this the oldest organized and continuously-serving Friends Meeting in the American Colonies. In 1725, the Society of Friends established their house of worship amongst these farms, at its current location, where Glen Cove and the Village of Matinecock meet at Piping Rock Road. In fact, the boundary between the two communities passes through the Matinecock Meeting House property. The Matinecock Quaker Meeting House derives its name from the Indian name for this part of Long Island that was occupied by the Matinecock Chieftancy of the Algonquin Tribes in the 17th century.

Friends Academy, situated across Duck Pond Road from the Meeting House, was founded by Gideon Frost in 1876 to educate Quaker children. Today it accepts students in kindergarten through twelfth grade regardless of denomination. All students and faculty are exposed to "Quaker Values" through weekly attendance at the Matinecock Meeting House.

Unfortunately, the landmark 1725 Matinecock Meeting House was destroyed by fire in 1985. Although no plans existed, the building was reconstructed as closely as possible to John Mott's original design using photographs and other records, and the rebuilt Meeting House was dedicated in 1986. Materials that survived the devastating fire were able to be incorporated into the new structure, such as some of the original yellow pine flooring, hand-made bricks, and wrought-iron hinges that were found in the rubble.

The Quaker Meeting historical marker is one of many in Glen Cove that have been restored in 2019 by Forest Iron Works of Locust Valley, funded by the Glen Cove 350 Committee.

The Robert R. Coles Long Island History Room actively seeks artifacts, photographs, prints, postcards, documents and other ephemera pertaining to our community's history! If you have anything you would like to donate please contact Carol Stern at 516-676-2130. Or email longislandhistory@glencovelibrary.org.
