BEATLEMANIA!
Tuesday, November 17, 7pm

Love the Beatles? Join Beatles expert, author and radio personality, Professor Moptop (Gregory Alexander), to discuss Beatlemania and all the excitement surrounding it.

Using rare audio and news clips, the Professor will discuss 1963 and 1964—the time period during which the Beatles fame spread throughout Europe, just before they came to America. Gregory Alexander has presented a weekly audio documentary called Beatle University on WXRT in Chicago for over twenty years, where he has dissected and discussed all of the band’s recordings in great detail. He has also written two books on the Beatles and their formative days, with volume three due out in 2021. Register here.

DEALING WITH HOLIDAY STRESS
Wednesday, December 2, 7pm

Stress is a normal part of life, but too much of it can wear us down both physically and emotionally. We can also feel physical stress from the shopping, decorating and cooking that comes along with the holidays. In this workshop, therapist, educator and life coach Diane Lang will discuss different ways to manage holiday stress. Learn how you can socially distance yet still celebrate with your family. She will also offer relaxation techniques to help you feel less stressed and more balanced so you can truly enjoy the holiday season. Register here.

IT’S A WONDERFUL LIFE FILM LECTURE
Tuesday, December 15, 2pm

Is it true that It’s a Wonderful Life began as a Christmas card? Join us to find out as Sal St. George explores this and so much more about this film.

In this presentation, Sal will discuss where the story originated, the original stars considered for the roles as well as how 1946 audiences responded to the film. Learn why James Stewart was reluctant to portray George as well as the circumstances that turned an obscure lost film into a beloved national classic. Register here.

Glen Cove COVID-19 Pandemic Project

Since the Library closed in mid-March due to the pandemic, the History Room staff has looked for innovative ways to engage the Glen Cove community to learn about and contribute to their city’s history. The COVID-19 Pandemic Project was started to help residents create primary source materials that can serve as valuable resources for future generations. The History Room’s webpage and social media introduces a variety of ideas and prompts to encourage the telling of first-person stories to create a community archive that is reflective of people of Glen Cove and is inclusive of various perspectives. Please contact us at longislandhistory@glencovelibrary.org if you would like to submit your story.

The following is an excerpt from a reflection submitted by Lisa Kelly:

Just as the news surfaced that COVID-19 would enter the United States of America (USA), the virus began to spread at the speed of lightning with an escalated threat to public safety. A close friend of mine explained how the coronavirus was unlike anything experienced during her more than 20 years of working as a nurse and the entire medical staff worked around the clock with such bravery, self-sacrifice, and dedication. During the second week of March 2020, Governor Cuomo signed the “New York State on PAUSE” executive order to ensure a complete closure of all non-essential businesses statewide. It felt like the world stood still and all you could hear was the uncertainty and fear of how to survive this unfamiliar deadly virus. Everyone had to stay home since there was a temporary ban on nonessential gatherings of individuals of any size for any reason. A beloved friend from Florida, who survived multiple hurricanes, encouraged my husband and me to increase storage of fundamental items. We immediately listened to her “two-of-everything” strategy, as my husband came home with two of everything after each visit to the store. Blessedly, we were very well prepared prior to the state shutdown.

As a real estate agent, my work-related efforts dramatically changed while getting ready to put a home on the market. To mitigate community transmission of COVID-19, I was required to facilitate everything from a virtual platform. Three-dimensional videos became an asset to display a more engaging virtual house tour.

For the first month of the standstill, I continued to exercise with my dear friend. We walked on opposite sides of the street for at least 10 miles, always remembering to wear our face masks. From March through the end of April, I only shopped at one local natural food store called Rising Tide because they offered curbside pick-up. You had to send your list by text message and wait three days for a response. That’s how backed up they were. The system they had established was run incredibly well. They assigned a personal shopper to simply text live during the assembly of each order. If an item on my list was not available, they would provide pictures of alternative options to choose from in real-time.

Frightfully, the coronavirus threat continued to travel throughout Long Island. It wasn’t until the second week in May, on Mother’s Day, that I saw my twin sister and her family for the first time since COVID-19 began. I missed them so much. Our families met at Oyster Bay Park with face masks on and we kept our social distance. At one point my sister asked, “Can I hug you?” My immediate answer was, “Yes!” We then hugged unapologetically for a few minutes. I love my family very much so being separated from each other for such an extended period of time was probably the hardest adjustment during this pandemic.

This coronavirus crisis has stirred a variety of emotions. Although I didn’t experience any personal loss, I still feel strong empathy for the families and friends of those whose lives that were tragically taken by COVID-19. It is unfortunate that people resorted to selfish hoarding of essential items in stores. I made sure only to purchase what I needed so that there would be something left for others. Hopefully, the world has learned valuable lessons during this global pandemic. I sure did and that is to whole-heartedly cherish each other and that is what really matters most in life.
